

The Linear Accelerator and Accumulator Storage Ring of the Spallation Neutron Source utilizes an extensive suite of diagnostic tools for measuring properties of the charged particle beam. Many of these tools present particular vacuum-related challenges while some rely on the vacuum system to function correctly. An overview of the different measurement systems of the accelerator will be presented.